

Don received his training in interior design from Merline Leaming of Clark Leaming in Salt Lake City, Utah. While there, he did this beautiful window of the nativity all in life size gingerbread cookies, including the camels which were fifteen feet high. All of the décor was baked to different colors of beige to dark, burned brown. This was installed at the height of the “All Natural Phase” of the seventies. President Gerald Ford saw the window and wanted to send an air transport to Utah to retrieve it for the lighting of the White House Tree. There was just not enough time allotted to do it!
